PIVO / BEER

Pivo, u nekim krajevima i piva, je alkoholno piće dobijeno nepotpunim vrenjem vodenog ekstrakta (rjeđe pšeničnog) slada uz dodatak hmelja.

Smatra se jednim od najstarijih alkoholnih pića u povijesti.

Pod pivom se podrazumijeva slabo alkoholno piće, koje se proizvodi u procesu alkoholnog vrenja iz slada, hmelja, vode i pivskog kvasca. Voda je glavni dio napitka. Slad se dobija od žitarica, najčešće od ječma i daje pivu sastojke ekstrata o kojem ovisi punoća okusa i koncentracija osnovnog ekstrata piva.

Hmelj konzervira pivo i daje mu ugodan miris i gorak ukus, dok pivski kvasac izaziva alkoholno vrenje u kome šećer prelazi u alkohol. Pivo je potpuno prirodan i biološki uravnotežen proizvod, pa se s pravom smatra "tekućom hranom". Energetska vrijednost jedne litre standardnog piva odgovara energetske vrijednosti jedne litre punomasnog mlijeka.

Pivo je jedno od najpopularnijih alkoholnih pića. Tijekom 1985. ekipa Škotskog narodnog muzeja iz Edinbourgha iskopala je u Rimu, na jednom od hebridskih otoka, posudu od terakote s nepoznatim sastojcima, iz neolitskog doba. Analizom tog nalaza dobijen je napitak za pivo, koje se dobijalo od zobi, meda i paprati. Ovo piće, za koje mnogi tvrde da je zapravo jelo, koristilo se već u pretpovijesnom razdoblju. Proizvodili su ga Kelti, Germani, Slaveni i Skiti. Proizvodilo se od ječma, pšenice, zobi i heljde, a mnogi stari narodi dodavali su mu razne začine i med. Današnji glavni sastojak, hmelj, počeo se koristiti tek u 13. stoljeću. Pivopijska središta u starom vijeku bila su u Armeniji, Mezopotamiji i Egiptu. Odatle su pivo kasnije preuzeli Grci i Rimljani.

Beer, in some regions beer, is an alcoholic beverage obtained by incomplete boiling of an aqueous extract of barley (less common wheat) malt with the addition of hops.

It is considered one of the oldest alcoholic beverages in history.

Beer refers to a weak alcoholic beverage, which is produced in the process of alcoholic fermentation from malt, hops, water and brewer's yeast. Water is a major part of the beverage. Malt is obtained from cereals, usually from barley, and gives beer the ingredients of the extract, on which the fullness of the taste and the concentration of the basic extract of the beer depend.

Hops conserve beer and give it a pleasant aroma and a bitter taste, while brewer's yeast causes an alcoholic fermentation in which sugar is converted into alcohol and carbon dioxide. Beer is a completely natural and biologically balanced product, so it is rightly considered a "liquid food". The energy value of one liter of standard beer corresponds to the energy value of one liter of whole milk.

Beer is one of the most popular alcoholic beverages. In 1985, a team from the Scottish National Museum in Edinburgh excavated a pot of terracotta with unknown ingredients from a Neolithic age in Rome, on one of the Hebrides Islands. An analysis of this finding yielded a beer drink made from oats, barley, honey and ferns. This drink, which many claim was actually a dish, was used as early as prehistoric times. It was produced by the Celts, Germans, Slavs and Scythians. It was made from barley, wheat, oats and buckwheat, and many ancient peoples added various spices and honey to it. Today's main ingredient, hops, was only used in the 13th century. The pivot centers in ancient times were in Armenia, Mesopotamia and Egypt. From there the beer was later taken by the Greeks and Romans.
